What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Tractors and motors will never wholly replace the Army Mule as a factor in the mobile units of our army. The Army Mule is a tradition and the "mule skinner" is a breed unto himself. Army Mules are used by the Field Artillery and the Cavalry in areas where the terrain is rough and tractors cannot operate.

Pack trains in mountainous sectors are often necessary and here the mule, slow but sure-footed, plays an important role. Our Army buys thousands of mules paying from $175 to $190 for each. The mule eats less, carries more, and some declare is smarter than the horse. Your purchase of War Bonds and Stamps helps pay for these Army Mules. Invest at least ten percent of your income in War Bonds every pay day.

This Yarn's Got To Be True!

An American reporter, Robert J. Casey of the Chicago Daily News foreign service, wrote the yarn—and it must have got by the Navy censor, else his paper couldn't have printed it.

It seems a U. S. sub, prowling daringly in Tokyo bay, spotted a huge liner in process of being converted into an aircraft carrier. The sub's commander swore a mighty sea oath. For the liner was out of the water, on the ways, and there is no way for a sub to toss a torpedo up on dry land.

The unattainable prize became an obsession with the commander. He stuck around for weeks. By day, while his sub lay on the harbor floor, he'd ponder the problem. By night he'd rise to the surface, turn his periscope on the liner—and swear his fierce sea oaths.

Time came when the submarine, its supplies low, had to leave. The commander poked his periscope above water for a last bold, desperate, daylight peek at the ship. A great crowd was gathered at the yard. Admirals were there. A brass band was playing. Workmen were knocking out the props. Somebody smashed a bottle of saki, and the carrier, gleaming and complete, slid down the ways.

As she hit the water, two tin fish from the sub hit her. The carrier plopped right on down to the bottom of the harbor. "It was," observes reporter Casey, "the most complete launching ever seen in Tokyo."

The sub came on home.

True? Of course the story's true, in every detail. It's a Yankee story of a Yankee feat. It's the best war story since wars began on earth. It's got to be true!

Mrs. Edith Irish of Buckeye and Mrs. Allen of Redding were overnight guests of Mrs. H. C. Smith Friday on their way home from San Gabriel and Los Angeles. On Sunday morning Mr. and Mrs. Walter Krohn of San Francisco came down and remained until Tuesday afternoon, and with Mrs. Smith enjoyed Monday at Capitola.

Stanley Smith Endorses Salsman For State Senate

Stanley B. Smith, Campbell orchardist today endorsed the candidacy of Byrl R. Salsman for the State Senate.

"In endorsing the candidacy for the State Senate," said Smith, "I have not done so without a careful comparison of his record with that of his opponent, and I think all the farmers in Santa Clara valley should make such a comparison, because we are so vitally interested in legislative representation.

"From the record of Salsman and his opponent—for they both have been members of the Assembly for the last four years—it clearly appears that Salsman has stood up for the independence of the State Legislature, for the strictest economy in state government, voting and working in favor of tax reduction and against the imposition of new state taxes, and against the practice of hot cargo and secondary boycott. His opponent on the other hand has followed the Governor's program right down the line—resisting almost all attempts of the economy bloc to save the taxpayers money; voting for millions in new state taxes and above all, voting to continue the hurtful practice of hot cargo and secondary boycott—even though that bill contained provisions limiting its effectiveness 'until January 1943, or during such time as the Nation is at war.

"Salsman's record in behalf of agriculture merits the support of the farmers of Santa Clara valley, and I endorse and recommend him without qualification."

Pictures of Fruit Harvesting Are Now Being Made

Pictures of fruit harvesting operations designed to acquaint thousands of California high school students with seasonal labor techniques in preparation for the 1943 harvest period, are being taken in Campbell area this week.

The pictures will be the basis for film strips to accompany a "Farm Victory Service" course being introduced into California high schools through the state department of education and the local high school administration. This offering is optional in each community.

Sequences in the Campbell district include harvesting of prunes, pears and peaches. Arrangements for the filming were made by Kenneth Dwyer, director of the agriculture department at Campbell High school. Photography is being done by George P. Couper, staff editor for the state bureau of agricultural education, San Luis Obispo.

The "Farm Victory Service" course will be prepared for an estimated 90,000 high school juniors and seniors in schools serving principally metropolitan or residential areas. Other training is being planned for high schools primarily serving rural areas. A booklet to aid teachers has been sent to the state printer, and the film strips will be available later in the year, Couper said.

Pictures being taken in Campbell are the first in a series of 22 seasonal labor operations which will include all important fruits and vegetables, plus grain and fiber crops.

The volunteers of the local fire department were called out Monday morning to extinguish a chimney fire at the J. H. Prout home on North Central avenue.

He was reported to have been drinking with two companions some time before and had apparently been lying where found for many hours.

Speaker Compares Education Here And In Germany

Ralph Fields, assistant superintendent of schools in San Jose was guest speaker at Tuesday's meeting of the Campbell Kiwanis club, his subject being "Education for Life, as Against Education for Death."

Chairman was Carl Field. Rev. Joyce Farr of Oakland was a visitor and Constable Lloyd Skeels, a member of the Lion's club of Morgan Hill, and Constable Ethan Lanphear of Campbell were guests.

Anderson said today that his survey work for the House Naval Affairs committee, of which he is a member, virtually is completed. He has been gathering data in shipyards and defense plants of the bay area, and will submit it to his committee.

He indicated today that he was amazed at the progress being made in defense works of this area. He said comparison with two years ago is startling, and he is convinced that conditions in plants in this section, with minor exceptions, are good. Plans already are under way, he added, to correct whatever discrepancies may exist. He pointed out that in his opinion labor and management have done a remarkable job of getting out war production.

Attack, the first publication for civilian consumption produced by the War Department Bureau of Public Relations, made its appearance this month in conjunction with the opening of the Army War Shows and Expositions which will be held in 15 large eastern and midwestern cities this summer.

Primarily a pictorial, the 56-page booklet sets forth the American way of fighting. "Attack is the American philosophy of war," it states. "It is the heritage of our new army, handed down to us by several generations of heroic fighting men. Attack has been the doctrine of all great American commanders since General George Washington crossed the icy Delaware river Christmas night, 1776."

The booklet brings the story of the Army down to the present moment with a series of dramatic photographs taken from the files of the U. S. Army Signal Corps and the Air Forces together with some of the best shots taken during the past six months by several leading American news photographers.

Featured are action shots of para-ski troops, tank destroyers, aerial gunners and many other soldiers who play a vital role in the new army. There are portraits of our army leaders in the United States and in various parts of the world where American troops are stationed.

One million copies of the first edition were published, half of which will be sold as souvenir programs at the Army War Shows. Proceeds from the sale of ATTACK go to Army Emergency Relief. The American Telephone and Telegraph Company, sponsors of the book, will circulate another half-million copies among the employees of the Bell System as a morale booster.

First Things Come First War Calls Must Go Through

A cherished tradition among telephone men and women is that "the message must go through."

War messages for the sake and safety of all of us must go through first.

The demands of War are placing a load on our Long Distance lines often beyond their capacity.

It is impossible to build more switchboards and lines because materials such as copper must be used in making munitions and weapons.

You who use the telephone in these critical times can aid in getting War messages through promptly and in cutting down possible delays on your own essential calls if you will—

Be brief—Plan what you want to say.

Make calls only that you find essential.

Place your calls by number and use station-to-station service.

Answer your telephone promptly.

Your cooperation in these simple matters will make possible the maximum use of existing voice highways. Thank you for your help.

Green Rays at Sunset
One of the visual marvels of nature which comparatively few persons have witnessed is the momentary flash of brilliant emerald green in the sky at the end of a sunset. Although the causes of this "green ray" are in dispute, it is widely believed that the coloration is caused by the bending of the rays of the sun by the atmosphere. The long red and yellow rays of light are bent least, and thus fade first as the sun disappears over a mountain or below the horizon and out of sight of an observer.

Farmers Endorse Fred Houser for Lieut.-Governor

An appeal to the farmers of California to vote for Fred Houser, candidate for Lieutenant Governor, in the state primary election next Tuesday was issued in a bulletin yesterday by a statewide committee of outstanding farmers comprised of members of the Farm Bureau, the Grange, Associated Farmers, and other farm groups. The appeal was based on the record of Houser, an assemblyman of Alhambra, in endeavoring to outlaw practices of "hot cargo and secondary boycott" in California. The bulletin was issued through the "Farmer's Committee for Fred Houser."

"Out of three candidates for this office," said the bulletin, "only Fred Houser has had the courage to go on record in support of the measure. One candidate favors continuing these unfair 'hot cargo' practices, while the third refuses to take a stand on this question which is so vital to our war effort."

Thrilling Picture at Los Gatos Theatre Sunday

Both these titans of literature used horrendous sea monsters, Hugo in "Toilers of the Sea" calling his a "devil fish" and Verne, in "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," dubbing his creature a "Krkons." Both authors undoubtedly had squids in mind but, science being what it was in their day, they differed violently in their descriptions.

DeMille, somewhat of a scientist in his own right besides being a great producer-director, made sure that Ray Milland and John Wayne battled the real thing in "Reap the Wild Wind." Just what they fought is a deep DeMille secret but of this one thing be sure, science cannot criticize DeMille's squid.

The DeMille sea monster, which writhes and wrestles, almost crushing the life out of Milland and Wayne while the beautiful Paulette Goddard, far above the murky depths of sea, awaits the outcome, has ten tentacles and a 60-foot spread.

"When you consider," DeMille said, "that 'Toilers of the Sea' was written in 1868 and 'Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea,' in 1859, whereas science didn't recognize the existence of giant squids until 1870, you will have to admit that Hugo and Verne monsters were pretty remarkable concepts—fully as remarkable, in fact, as Verne's anticipation of the submarine."

Also included in the cast is Raymond Massey, Robert Preston, Susan Hayward, Lynne Overman and Martha O'Driscoll.

"Reap the Wild Wind" is based on a Saturday Evening Post story by Thelma Strabel.

Sid Farrington Recommends Jack Thompson

I am endorsing Jack Thompson as a candidate for the 29th Assembly district because he is acquainted with the problems of both the farmer and business man of this district and the type of man that will give full consideration to all factors involved in any decision.

I have observed Thompson's work and attitude in his agricultural endeavors and know that he will be an active and careful legislator and work toward the best interest of all concerned, and has the necessary experience to qualify him for that effort.

It is my hope and recommendation that the voters in this district will give him full consideration and place him in that office for the betterment of agriculture and business.

DEMOCRATS URGE SUPPORT OF EARL WARREN

"Olson Must Go," Says Democratic Leader; Democrats Head Warren Committees

Signalling the mounting volume of rank and file Democrats switching away from Olson leadership, Democratic Assemblyman Jack B. Tenney, well known Musicians Union leader in Los Angeles and legislative investigator of subversive activities, strongly opposes Governor Olson's re-election.

Tenney was one of the governor's staunchest supporters at the beginning of the Olson administration. This is what he now has to say:

"There can be no real Democracy within the Democratic party in California so long as its control rests with the present leadership. There is no room for independent thinking or wholesome opposition to the MACHINE."

"Olson has mistaken leadership for ownership. A change is absolutely necessary. Olson must go!"

Tenney's position is endorsed it appears by thousands of Democrats in California. Significantly Democratic leaders head more than half the County Committees active in the Warren campaign for Governor.

"Democrats," declares Jos. J. Rosborough, former Oakland Postmaster and Democratic leader, "should ponder well the words of Assemblyman Tenney, an outstanding leader in our own party."

"In this time of great national emergency, President Roosevelt has asked that petty partisanship be adjourned for greater responsibilities. California needs an administration pledged to that principle. Earl Warren, whose integrity has never been questioned, pledges such an administration. And Warren has never been known to break his word."

Storks Must Stay at Home!
The shoe-billed stork or whale-head is considered an ornithological rarity. Coming from a restricted range in Africa, few have ever been taken out of that country and further exportation is now prohibited. Their enormous beaks are very powerful and the hook at the tip is capable of tearing great gashes. Few birds are more deliberate in action and they are perfect examples of slow motion. At the Chicago Zoological park, which probably has the largest number in captivity, visitors often ask if they are stuffed.

THE BOOK MARK

by marty

"Tap Roots" by James Street.

Here is another one of those historical novels dealing with the time prior to the Civil War by only a few years. When was the Civil War? Around 1860 somewhere, wasn't it? "Tap Roots" begins its action about 1858 and comes to a powerful climax in the year 1865, so you can readily determine the dominant theme of the book. You think you can — but I caution you not to be too quick to make a decision. Though the major activities employ fighting, this book is a tale of people, their characteristics and their inner lives. Never have I read a book that could compare with this one in respect to character delineation. Circumstances have very little to do with the characters' actions—they do things because they are what they are, not because they feel they want to or are forced to. The Dabneys, Hoab and Evan, Morna, Shellei and Sam, are the members of the family about which this book is written.

It is in Mississippi that the Dabneys lived and in that state is where practically all of the action takes place. To begin with Sam Dabney, the eldest member of the family lives long enough in the beginning of the book to give a forecast of what was coming as to the other members of the family. Sam was a great man and widely known for his hard and strict moral code as well as for his daring and righteousness. With the passing of Sam comes his son, Hoab, who leads the family in its established traditions throughout the struggles of war. It was war to abolish slavery which the Dabney clan was decidedly against and it was war to save the Union which the Dabney clan was for one hundred per cent. In the story comes Keith Alexander, the famously handsome Black Knight of Vengeance, unheralded, defying anyone to question him about his people. Keith met his equal in the red-headed Morna Dabney, and lost his heart to her. Jefferson Davis feared Keith more than he feared the Union Army. In addition to meeting Jefferson Davis you will meet Clay MacIvor, the hero, who loved two women.

Dr. Hrdlicka bases his conclusions on his own measurements of 1,000 prisoners of both sexes from 5 to 16 years of age. Physical measurements of the actual criminal, he believes, can show only that he tends to be abnormal. There is no possibility of connecting abnormality with criminality.

The FARMERS CORNER

by RALPH H. TAYLOR

Executive Secretary
Agricultural Council of California

In this critical war emergency, when able, constructive, non-partisan leadership is desperately needed in every governmental office to strengthen our home front and back up our armed forces, California citizens cannot afford to shirk their responsibility at next Tuesday's primary election.

Nominations are to be made at that election for 134 major state offices, together with hundreds of city and county offices—and, in many instances, nominations will be the equivalent of election.

The men who are nominated next Tuesday will, for the most part, be the government officers on whom California must depend for aggressive, intelligent, unselfish leadership during a period when the war may be brought to our own shores—and when bickering, or indecision, or lack of ability to measure up to the emergency might cause untold loss of human life, and the crippling of our vital war production industries.

California simply can't afford to stay away from the polls at this election. Regardless of party or partisan considerations, we can't afford incompetents in public office during this emergency. We can't afford to permit politicians, and interested groups, with an axe to grind, to dominate at that election.

These are the men—these men who are to be nominated Tuesday—who will be in power, if martial law comes to California. From the lowliest peace officer to Governor, from assemblymen to congressmen, these are the men on whom we must depend, to large extent, to protect the security of our families, and the safety of our homes.

This writer does not endorse candidates for office; the farm co-ops which are included in the membership of the Agricultural Council of California include men and women of every political faith and party affiliation. This is not in any sense a partisan appeal. It is simply an appeal to every right thinking Californian to get out and vote next Tuesday, and to make certain that every man he votes for is the ablest man available for the job, regardless of what party label he may wear.

The primary campaign this year, over-shadowed by the war, has failed to arouse public interest as in other years, and election experts, alarmed at the fact that the voters are apparently apathetic, have warned during the last few days that only a light vote may be expected at Tuesday's election unless civic organizations do their utmost to get voters to the polls.

Certainly every farmer and every farm organization should participate in the drive to get out the vote, and to acquaint voters with the seriousness of the situation.

Regardless of whether the candidates be Democrats or Republicans; regardless of whether they are running for local office or high state office, every candidate this year should be measured by a common yardstick.

Voters should ask themselves these fundamental questions about the candidates who are seeking their votes:

Has this man the capacity for war-time leadership? Is he partisan in his approach to the job, and still thinking of "politics as usual," or is he big enough to put winning the war first, and selfish interest second?

Is this man "owned" by any particular group or faction, or is he free to act for all the people—and to achieve the highest possible degree of unity now when it is so badly needed?

Is this man a political spendthrift, who will waste public funds on non-essential,

The Leaning Tower of Baltimore

By IRVIN S. COBB

IN BALTIMORE, years ago, there was a shot tower that stood up in the air to a considerable height. Almost at the base of the shot tower a serious-minded German ran a saloon.

Eugene Havez, afterwards a New York theatrical man and now in the moving picture business in California, lived in Baltimore when the shot tower stood there. One day Havez and a friend of his found themselves in the vicinity of the shotworks. Both were thirsty and both, as it happened, without funds. Havez had an idea.

He outlined it to his companion and then they entered the saloon in a violent argument with each other.

"I'll bet you anything I'm right," Havez declared.

"You're wrong," stated his friend stubbornly: "you're just naturally bound to be wrong."

They lined up at the bar still debating. The German waiting patiently to serve them became interested.

"I'll show you how game I am," said Havez. "I'll bet you the drinks I'm right and leave it to our friend here to decide it."

"That's a go," said the other man.

"Set out the drinks," commanded Havez.

The German served them and they drank.

"Now, boys," inquired the saloon man, "vat is dis pet?"

"It's like this," said Havez edging toward the door, "my friend here bets that when the shot tower falls down it will fall to the north. I say it will fall to the south."

THEY FEED THE FURNACES of WAR

Natural Gas Workers
Fight, too, for Victory

WHEN PEARL HARBOR plunged the United States into war, this utility company was prepared. No mobilization orders were necessary.

Our men, already working at full capacity, were ready. And among these non-military forces, trained by years of experience, one mighty important division is composed of the Gas Workers. They are men from many skilled crafts—engineers, chemists, gas technicians, compressor operators, pipe fitters and layers, trench machine drivers.

Their job is a big one. They must maintain a system of thousands of miles of transmission and distribution pipe lines, through which natural gas from the oil and gas fields of Central and Northern California is carried. They must deliver a constant flow of gas to the war plants in this extensive territory—to the steel furnaces, the shipyards, the cement plants, the shops and factories where production requires efficient heat.

Millions of cubic feet also must be supplied for the making of metallic magnesium. At the same time, the Gas Workers must maintain service to the cooking ranges and the heaters of 600,000 homes and supply the other fuel needs of some 3,000,000 people.

They are doing all this, laboring day and night, worthily carrying their share of the fight for Victory.
